Meeting of the Mississippi River Commission—Death of an Old Pioneer of Chicago.

Northern Pacific Matters.

New York, Aug 18.—Expectations [illegible] of a dividend on the preferred stock of the Northern Pacific Railroad company were disappointed [illegible] day at the regular meeting of the [illegible] directors of the company, at which [illegible] had it that a dividend was to be declared. The subject was not even mentioned in a formal way. Routine business was attended to chiefly relating to construction. It is understood that the directors have informally agreed among themselves it would not be prudent to declare a dividend at this time. The chief reason is said to be the hostile attitude towards the company of the last congress, and with the desire to avoid possible animosity in the next congress through an appearance of prosperity in the company. An officer of the company said that the directors thought it prudent to [illegible] dividend until all funds necessary to finish the road were on hand. The board of directors adjourned to meet September 14th. The annual meeting of stockholders will be held September [illegible]

Arkansas Affairs.

Little Rock, Aug 18.—In response to an appeal for aid from Bethune & Smith, contractors of the Springfield & Memphis railroad, stating that their negro laborers have been frightened from work by threats of death from a white mob disguised as Ku Klux, Gov Churchill telegraphed the sheriff of Craighead county to investigate and protect the laborers. No further particulars are received.

To-day, in response to a telegram from Governor Cain, [illegible] inquiring whether he should state the board of health desire that the government will bear the expense of inspection service of the Texas Pacific railroad as protection against yellow fever now raging at Matamoras and Brownsville, Secretary Folger telegraphs the department will begin inspection on that road whenever the governor requests it.

The afternoon gravel train on the Iron Mountain road was ditched near Benton to-day. The locomotive and 15 cars are a total wreck. Conductor Mc[illegible] was killed.

Chicago Notes.

Chicago, Aug 18.—The Tribune says: Through the short-sighted policy of the roads leading from Chicago to Missouri river points in advancing grain freight to very little grain is coming this way, but is taking the cheaper barge line route to the seas from Missouri and Kansas.

The Western Distiller's Association have appointed an executive committee, adopted resolutions favoring the enforcement of laws for the observance of the Sabbath, a well-digested license law, with high figures for each license granted, and opposing any conflict with either political party. The sentiment of the distillers attending the meeting is very strong against taking any political action. H. B. Miller was elected president. Further business of the association will be transacted at a meeting at Indianapolis, date not fixed.

AN OMINOUS PICTURE.

The Extreme Tory View of the British Situation.

From the London News.

Law and order trampled under foot, class enmities envenomed, the rights of property overturned, a country entering within the very shadow of civil war, and a vast empire threatened with disruption—these are the concluding words of an article in which the Quarterly Review in the new number issued yesterday describes what it calls "The Paralysis of Government." The lines suggest a political puzzle. They recall Byron's enigma on the letter whispered in heaven and muttered in hell. But they have no enigmatical meaning. This is a piece of word painting. It describes a terrible reality Englishmen will be loth to believe it, but it is a picture of themselves. It is the British empire which is thus in the throes of dissolution. It is only necessary to read the four and thirty pages of calm statement, of impartial history, of reasoning which only Mr Ashmead Bartlett could exceed in cogency, and terrible as the description is, it comes out in the natural climax of the liberal policy. Mr Gladstone, says the reviewer, has given the nation the benefit of his best services and of his highest talents, and we see the results. If the nation does not see them, it must be because the curse the prophet of old invoked upon his enemies has fallen upon them. They must be smitten with blindness. The blindness is due, the tory oracle declares, to the radical journals, which succeed to an unprecedented extent in inducing the public to adopt their views. The Daily News is quoted in proof of the revolutionary propaganda which is thus so successfully carried on. Speaking some time since of Irish agrarian crime, we pointed out that with the Whiteboys and the Tithe war within the memory of living statesmen it was a mistake to regard existing disturbances as unprecedented in quantity or in quality. The reviewer quotes these words as a feature of systematic efforts to give the outbreak of crime in Ireland an insignificant aspect. The farmers alliance, the growth of which in importance and influence is acknowledged, is spoken of as an English imitation of the land league, and its case as built on the foundation that a landlord is a land thief. The Daily News has been ransacked for proofs that this is the radical teaching, and one is supposed to be found in a sentence written in these columns last September describing the land as "like a mouse [illegible] in the toils of an antiquated system [illegible] our farmers and laborers [illegible] longer on for years and years under the [illegible] because they are not likely to get [illegible] world. PASSING THROUGH THE SUEZ CANAL.

After coaling at Malta we steamed [illegible] through the Mediterranean over the smoothest sea and beneath the bluest sky it was ever my happy lot to see. It was about five o'clock one morning when we first saw the lighthouse at Port Said, and at one o'clock we entered between the two piers which guard the entrance to the canal and stretch far out into the Mediterranean. Passing a Turkish frigate and a French ram we slowly steamed [illegible] left hand shore and made fast to a buoy. No sooner were we fast than the Arabs swarmed on board and soon coal was coming over the side and into the bunkers at a rapid rate from barges alongside. On the left hand for a long distance stretched [illegible] sheds for this is the great coaling port for steamers bound eastward, there being quite a difference in the price here and at the other end of the canal. On the right was the town of Port Said, while in front [illegible] in the desert appeared the canal, the grandest engineering feat of the age. Just fancy the amount of labor when it was necessary to carry the sand a mile off into the desert and at the same time prevent the surrounding sand from drifting and rolling into its place. Just take a handful of sand out from a pile and see how quickly the hole is filled up, and you then form some idea of the undertaking. I was told out there that the English at London did the work through inability to obtain laborers at any price, and that the French only [illegible] that the [illegible] refusal to work was instantly followed by a [illegible] that every foot of the canal is a monument of [illegible] devils at the [illegible] line. However this was, the canal was [illegible] lay the only route for steamers [illegible] About [illegible] on board and in a few minutes we left our moorings and steamed into the canal. The channel has about twenty-six feet of water in it, and which is only kept at that depth by constant work at the dredges and by strengthening the sides with sinking rock and walling up the ends where they are the most threatened. On both sides the embankments are up to a height of [illegible] feet and are composed of the dull brown sand which stretch away on both sides as far as the eye can see, the horizon shrouded in the blinding glare of the heated air rising from the burning sands till the eyes ache and the heart sickens at the dismal scene. With what relief we turn to the canal stretching like a blue sparkling ribbon and feast our eyes on the sight of a station looming up a half-mile ahead with its little cottage, its shrubbery and trees planted right in the midst of a desert and drawing life from a well which has been brought [illegible] miles to make life endurable to the station master, banished away out here hundreds of miles from his own fair France. For who else but a Frenchman would ever think of bringing his garden with him with its flowers and trees out here in this wilderness of sands? We tied up for a few seconds to let one of the P. & O. steamers pass us, for every vessel must give way to the Royal Mail except men-of-war, which have the right of way everywhere. The canal is not wide enough for vessels to pass each other, so every quarter of a mile or so there is a wider place for tying up, and the vessel reaching there first makes fast to the bank and allows the other one to pass, except in the case of a vessel carrying the mails or a man-of-war, both of which go right on through without stopping except during the night.

On the right hand side runs a track, and I was startled by the familiar sound of the engine whistle, and the next minute a train swept by at the rate of forty miles an hour while overhead—

Like strings of ghosts
The telegraph posts
Came quickly tripping by.

I noticed on the other bank a veritable caravan [illegible] of the desert—horses and camels and the man all wrapped up in his white [illegible] with the same long rifle with its [illegible]

DeFreycinet's International Views.

New York, August 17.—Herald's Paris: A correspondent of the Petite Marseillaise professes to have had an important interview with M. DeFreycinet, in course of which the ex-president of the council is reported to have said that he believed the Egyptian question would be speedily settled by England thanks to the assistance that she could receive from the Sultan and the powerful sheik El Lanussi. DeFreycinet speaks confidently of Alexandria again becoming a faubourg of Marseilles and expressed the opinion that France would do well after the reaction to bring about an amicable understanding between England and Turkey and endeavor to get a footing in the Red Sea. He says he is skeptical as to the policy of international friendship generally. He thinks the policy of egotism on the whole is best for nations nowadays. He advocates a parallel alliance of Latin races. In conclusion he doubts whether Bismarck has cause to be delighted with the result of the Egyptian policy. DeFreycinet's statement commenting on a sensational pamphlet entitled "The allies of France against England, or to whom does the Mediterranean belong," is just published in Paris. In this pamphlet an anonymous writer describing himself as the father of the Frenchman killed during the bombardment of Alexandria makes a savage and merciless attack on England for the egotism of her policy in the Mediterranean and calls on all the Latin nations to unite to expel her from her present strongholds.

Germany Becoming Irritable.

The [illegible] says: "The porte cannot undertake military intervention in Egypt under the same conditions as it could have intervened in July. Rev W S Turner presented the following resolution:

Resolved, That the pledge made by Br. McKean at the last session of conference has not been fulfilled.

After considerable discussion it was ordered as a substitute for the whole of the above that a committee of five be appointed to inquire into the case of Bro. McKean and if in their judgment it is demanded they shall formulate a bill of charges against him.

It was ordered that when we adjourn it be to meet at 2 o'clock P. M. to-day.

The Bishop presented the following: The following persons were by me ordained deacons in Baker City, Or., Aug 13, 1882: Thomas A. Towner, William Conrad and John W. Cullen; and the following were by me ordained elders in the Methodist Episcopal church: David E. George and Richard Barret. JNO. F. HURST.

On motion the Bishop was authorized to appoint the committee in the case of Bro. McKean.

Adjourned to 2 o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

It was ordered that the reference of the case of Bro. McKean to a committee be reconsidered and the following presented as a substitute:

Whereas, Bro. McKean has now been a member of the Columbia river conference for six years, during all of which time his family has been in the states, and

Whereas, This fact has militated against his own best influence as a minister and also been an injury to the church, therefore

Resolved, That without discrediting the statements of Bro. McKean relative to the support of his family or the reasons why they are not with him, we believe a continuance of their absence from him or his from them ought not to be permitted by this conference, and

Resolved, That Bro. McKean be required to bring his family to his charge within the next conference year or else return to them.

Cookery.

From Ruskin.

What does cookery mean? It means the knowledge of Medea and of Circe and of Calypso and of Helen, and of Rebekah and of the Queen of Sheba. It means knowledge of all herbs and fruits and balms and spices, and of all that is healing and sweet in field and grove; it means carefulness and inventiveness [illegible] the economy of your great grandmother and the science of modern chemists; it means much testing and no wasting; it means English thoroughness and French art and Arabian hospitality; and it means, in fine, that you are to be perfectly and always ladies, loaf-givers, and as you are to see imperatively that everybody has something pretty to put on, so you are to see yet more imperatively that every one has something nice to eat.

SATURDAY MORNING, AUGUST 19, 1882.

LEGISLATIVE WORK.

Once only in six years have we a legislature which does not elect a United States senator. Two sessions out of three this is the absorbing topic. Nothing else can be considered till it is disposed of, and after it is disposed of there is little time and less inclination for anything else. And in general those measures which do obtain consideration are of small importance. They are mostly special acts, of limited scope and often of temporary utility, if indeed they possess any utility at all. Measures of larger scope and wider range require care, comparison and study. There is real labor in all useful legislation, and members are seldom inclined to undertake things that require work, especially after they have become fagged out by the effort and excitement that usually attend the election of a senator.

We are not complaining that we do not get more legislation. We get too much, but not of the right kind. Qualitative reform would give us better legislation, and quantitative reform would give us less of it. It is not at all beyond probability, if indeed it be beyond demonstration, to say that our codes, both civil and criminal, as well as the body of our general laws, were better ten years ago than they are now. Amendment does not always amend. To innovate is not to reform. At every session of our legislature a whole grist of amendments is put through with mischievous haste; and the effect often is to confuse and mar the laws rather than to simplify and improve them.

In the petty details of legislation we have have had too much work, but in many matters of the first importance too little. The measures which have been adopted have often been of a partial and superficial character, where thoroughness of treatment, on an intelligent and wide survey of the subject, was very much to be desired. There, for instance, is our system of providing for the valuation and assessment of property for taxation. It needs to be thoroughly reformed. The discussion is an old one and innumerable attempts have been made to introduce certain radical amendments which individual study of the subject and the experience of other states have alike pointed out. But it has been found impossible to make certain leading principles understood. Simple as they are to all who have examined the subject in all its parts, yet no legislature as yet has been induced to adopt them. The attempt to tax credits fails and must always fail. Only tangible property can be surely reached, and this ought to be taxed in the hands of its owner, without reference to his obligations to others. He, in his turn, will find his compensation in the lower rate of interest which he pays on his indebtedness, while the county and state will have the benefit of uniform, impartial and accurate valuation.

The whole state is deeply interested in the subject of pilotage and towage at the mouth of the Columbia river, and the larger part of Washington territory is interested in it, too. The laws on this subject which now exist and have long existed were drawn in the days when the commerce of the river was limited, and have necessarily ceased to answer present requirements. Attempts have often been made to amend and make them fit for the new conditions of a larger and rapidly growing commerce, but such attempts have been continually defeated, apparently for no better reason than the supposition that a measure which was urged by representatives from the city of Portland could not be good for the state at large. On a basis no broader than this our most important legislation is often considered. Where indolence does not stand as an obstacle to consideration of necessary measures, or absorption in politics when a senator is to be elected does not monopolize all activity of thought and effort, petty jealousy—the jealousy of locality—often supervenes, and the session passes without any results which might just as well not have been gained.

Experience therefore has taught sensible observers not to look to the legislature with the expectation that it will at any time do great things for the state. Few questions can be started in that body upon which there will not be found great contrariety of opinion. In the nature of things few subjects that come before a legislative body have been examined with any approach to thoroughness by many of the members, and maturity of thought is necessarily always to its concentration upon its objects. Fortunately every community has a body of laws which answer an excellent purpose, though never quite perfect; and every community has reason to fear too much additional legislation rather than the danger that it will obtain too little.

"AMERICAN NOTES."

The historian, Mr. Edward A. Freeman, who was in America last year "takin' notes," has begun to "print 'em," giving in the current number of the London Fortnightly a chapter on his "Impressions of America." What seems, so far as his revelations have yet gone, to affect him most is the ignorance of Americans with regard to English manners, and more especially their ignorance of English geography. He instances being asked whether Lincolnshire was on the west side of England or on the east, and whether the county of Somerset derived its name from the dukes of Somerset. He probably met some who were as much struck by the coincidence as was Secretary Lincoln's little son by the fact that so many presidents were named after streets in Chicago. But isn't Mr. Freeman judging us by a somewhat insular, pedigogical standard? England is only about a fifth larger, reckoned by square miles, than the state of New York. How many Englishmen can tell where in the empire state are situated the counties of Genesee and Columbia, or even the more aristocratic shires, Kings, Queens and Duchess? The fact is, what seems to Mr. Freeman's somewhat formal mind defects in the education of our people are not to be wondered at, and are hardly worthy of the criticism that the historian devotes to them. Had the American people concerned themselves particularly with the details that he considers so important, the great American republic might have shown deficiencies that, in his capacity as a chronicler of events and their lessons, would have given him something really significant to write about. The very largeness of this country easily accounts for what Mr. Freeman seems pleased to consider ignorance. There is such a multiplicity of names and places in this country that not even its scholars can hope to master the geography in its entirety. The Englishman of letters, especially in Mr. Freeman's line, thinks that a thorough knowledge of English geography should belong to the rudimentary education of every enlightened people. Over here we take a little different view of it. To be sure, the more knowledge every man has the better for him, provided he doesn't get top-heavy and overbalanced, but there are other kinds of knowledge more essential, not only to practical dealing with the problems of life, but to abstract culture as well, than that which can promptly locate the towns and shires of England.

A PROFITABLE POSTOFFICE.

Postmaster Pearson's statement of the business of the New York postoffice for the year ending with June, 1882, shows that the total receipts were $4,200,066 07 and the total expenditures $1,316,016 40, leaving a profit to the government of $2,884,049 67. This result is the most satisfactory ever reported at the end of a year's work of the institution, and Postmaster Pearson deserves public commendation for his achievement. It was said by some when Gen. James began his series of sweeping reductions in the expenses of the United States postal department that the increased deficiency at the end of the year would compensate for the reductions. But it has not been so. In fact, for the first time in the history of the government the postal department has been self-sustaining for one year. The profit from the New York postoffice has been a great item to balance the accounts of the department. But Postmaster Pearson does not advocate a reduction of letter postage to two cents as much as he does measures to increase the efficiency of the postal service. If all the postoffices in the United States were managed as efficiently as that of New York, the rate of letter postage could be reduced, and yet the postal department would be self-sustaining.

The Cincinnati Commercial says: "Thirty-one years ago the prohibitionists of Ohio took the position that they reaffirmed on Thursday last, and denounced as a guilty wrong every attempt to compromise with it the liquor traffic—license, taxation, or any other form of regulation, for the manifest reason that any compromise with crime is itself a crime. "Now," asks the Commercial, "what has been the practical result? For thirty-one years there has been free trade in liquor in Ohio. Saloons and grog-shops have multiplied and increased. The liquor interest is more strongly intrenched than ever. Having no license to pay, subject to few regulations, it has become vast in its proportions, and commands an amount of capital never then dreamed of. We are annually told that the people of Ohio are about to rise up en masse and put away the evil thing, and the elections show as regularly no particular evidence of such a change of mind. The vote for the prohibition ticket has a dreary uniformity as to numbers that shows how absolutely hopeless a case it is, and how utterly unavailing are the efforts to increase it. The liquor sellers, taught by experience, have no fear of this parcel of impracticables. As long as they have the prohibitionists with them in denouncing license or taxation as a crime, they will continue to flourish in an unrestricted trade." Just so in Maine and Massachusetts.

The eminently successful experiments in telephony recently made by the Belgian meteorologist, M. van Rysselberghe, will greatly enlarge the usefulness of the telephone. This experimenter has succeeded in eliminating from telephonic communication through a wire the inductive action of a neighboring telegraph wire, and in employing the same wire at the same time for telegraphic and telephonic work. Thus in a recent experiment a message was sent from Brussels by the Morse telegraph to the director of telegraphs in Paris, and an oral message sent by telephone was distinctly heard while the Morse receiver was in action. Recent telephonic connections have been made between Venice and Milan, Berlin and Hamburg, Paris and Nancy; and it is reported an attempt will shortly be made similarly to connect Munich and Dresden, a distance of about 340 miles. But what gives greater interest and importance to M. Rysselberghe's experiments is, that it vanishes the difficulty of submarine telephony. A submarine cable interferes with the speed of signaling. But, in the late experiment between Brussels and Dover, conversation was freely exchanged without extraordinary vocal effort through 80 miles of cable and nearly 200 miles of air line.

In not one single county of the Willamette valley could a candidate be elected to the legislature who should avow his intention, if elected, to vote for J. H. Mitchell for the United States senate. Nor is this all. Had it not been well understood by the voters that the nominations throughout the valley generally were against him, and positively so, there would be a beggarly account of empty benches on the republican side of the legislature. In Lane, Benton, Polk, Marion, Yamhill, Washington and Clackamas, Mitchell candidates for the legislature could not carry one vote in three. A fair test of the "popularity" claimed for the leader of the gang who make machine politics a trade would be found in submitting his name to a direct vote of the people—say for representative in congress. With the regularity of a party nomination he would be beaten 5000 votes. Throughout all the agricultural counties of the state he has no vote now in the legislature which was not smuggled in.

Another colored cadet is to face the spirit of caste which has ruled at West Point. He comes from Florida, and is described as a very bright and promising youth who has won his appointment by excelling his rivals in a competitive examination. Almost everybody but the white cadets will be glad that the appointment has been made, for since it has appeared to be the purpose of the white members of the school to keep colored young men out, it has become the purpose of the people to have it demonstrated that the colored man has rights in the national military academy which the white cadets must respect. Cadet Whittaker was shamefully abused at West Point, whoever mutilated his ears, and so was Flipper. It now remains to be seen whether the dusky young Floridan will be maltreated by his classmates.

John Bright, having been asked by a Manchester gentleman to define his position in regard to war, says he believes that all the English wars since the time of William III. might have been avoided on principles which do not require the absolute condemnation of war in every possible case that can be suggested or imagined. "The policy and aspect of our country, and the world," he adds, "will be changed if the demon war is left to the cases in which there seems to Christian and rational men no escape from the miseries it inflicts upon mankind."

The question as to the liquor traffic in Ohio has not as yet assumed the prohibition form. It is taxation and Sunday closing. It is believed these will carry in spite of the heavy vote of the cities.

WAS IT MURDER!

Georgio Ricco Shot and Killed by a Brother Italian.

ENDEAVORING TO HIDE THE CRIME

The Body Dragged Two Hundred Yards to a Little Creek and Concealed with Underbrush—The Perpetrator Arrested by the Police in Portland.

An Italian, known as Georgio Ricco, was shot and killed last Tuesday by G. Miciannini. The crime may prove a dastardly murder, for circumstantial evidence is already very strong against him. The deed was committed in Skamania county, Washington Territory, on the bank of [illegible] creek, about three-quarters of a mile above Cape Horn. Miciannini came to Portland, and was arrested by the police upon suspicion. Yesterday, [in] a conversation he confessed to the crime, but stoutly claimed that he committed the deed in self-defense.

HOW IT CAME ABOUT.

[illegible] on the river [illegible] factory, where [illegible] principally, are [illegible] by Chinese [illegible]. This factory was in charge of [illegible] who was a partner in the business with a man named McBride. All the help is employed in the factory were Italians and among them was an old man whose real name was unknown [illegible], but who gave his name to his employers as Georgio Ricco. Ricco was an industrious and economical man and had saved about $200 from his earnings, which sum he always carried with him. Nearly all of his companions knew of his having this money, which he wore in a belt about his body.

A POCKET-BOOK LOST.

In the morning of the day on which Ricco was killed Giannini went from the factory to a ranch about a mile or so away to get some fruit. Upon his return in the afternoon he told the hands at the factory that he had lost his pocket-book, a large leather one, containing many valuable papers and some bank checks and that it must be found. At first he intimated that it had been stolen, but finally said he had probably lost it on the road to the farm, and told the men they might knock off work for the rest of the day and look for the pocket-book until [six] o'clock. Then addressing himself to Ricco, he said: "You stay here with me and we will look around the house." Ricco remained, while the rest set out on a search for the missing pocket-book.

THE FIRST A SHOTS FIRED.

While they were gone they heard three pistol shots fired in rapid succession, but paid no attention to the sound, which was not an unusual one in the woods and along the shore. The search for the pocket-book was diligently carried on the whole length of the road, but resulted fruitlessly, and after about two hours the whole party returned to the factory. Giannini was standing in front of the house, on a high bluff which overlooked the river, awaiting them. In his hand he held the missing pocket-book, which he waved triumphantly over his head. Before any one spoke he shouted, exultantly, "I found my pocket-book; I found it in his breast."

RICCO WAS MISSING.

Looking around the men noticed that Ricco was not there, and crowding about Giannini, they asked him what was the matter. He replied, "We went to looking about the house for the pocketbook, and while we were both stooping over I saw it sticking inside his vest. I knocked him down and took it away from him and then discharged him. He is now on his way to Portland." This explanation seemed satisfactory for a time, but when the men came to talk it over among themselves there arose suspicions of a murder. One of the men, Pietro Antonelli, an old time comrade and friend of Ricco, declared that under no circumstances would the latter have gone off without saying something about the matter to him, and he did not believe Ricco ever stole the pocketbook.

FOUND A POOL OF BLOOD.

Later in the day some of the men found a pool of blood near the house, and they asked Giannini if he had any fight with Ricco. He laughed at them for thinking he would fight an old man, and said the blood was that of a hog he had killed the day before for meat. Soon after Antonelli was asked by Giannini to buy a blanket which had belonged to Ricco, Giannini saying "He won't come back after it, and I suppose its mine now and I have a right to sell it." This more than confirmed Antonelli's former suspicions that all was not right about the mysterious disappearance of his old friend. Fearing, however, for his own life if he made known his thoughts, he said nothing until after Giannini had left the factory.

GIANNINI COMES TO PORTLAND.

The next morning, taking with him everything of value he had at the factory, Giannini started for Portland. Arriving here he put up at the St. Charles, and went about the city transacting several little matters of business. Meanwhile Antonelli, having discussed his suspicions among his comrades at the factory became so agitated with the thought that his friend had been murdered that he could neither eat nor sleep, and on Thursday he also came down to Portland. During the day he met Giannini upon the street and asked him if he had seen Ricco. He replied that he had; they had met the night before, made friends, taken a drink together and he had gone to the steamer with him, getting him a ticket and seeing him safe aboard and on his way to San Francisco. He also said Ricco told him that when he reached California he was going to ship for Havana, Cuba.

NOT A SATISFACTORY STORY.

Giannini told this story so straightforwardly that at first Antonelli was almost disarmed of his suspicions. But he and Ricco had mutual friends in the city and visiting them he inquired for his missing friend. Nothing had been seen of him. Mr. Galli, who keeps a fruit stand on First street, near Taylor, had some things which belonged to Ricco, and he said the latter would never have passed through the city without calling upon him. Mr. A. Ferrara, the grocer, also said if Ricco had contemplated a trip to California or Cuba, he would have certainly told him something about it as they were old friends. All the Italians in the city who heard Antonelli's story believed unquestionably that a murder had been committed, and resolved to put the matter in the hands of the police, which was done that evening.

THE CAPTURE.

Having received a good description of Giannini, Policeman James Barry started out on a search for him and shortly before midnight chanced to meet him on the street. When told he was wanted on a charge of murder he went along with Barry to the jail without any resistance. When questioned there about the crime, he stoutly asserted his innocence and told the same story of Ricco's whereabouts that he had related to Antonelli. When he first came to the station he spoke very good English, but yesterday morning he refused to talk except through the medium of an interpreter. A clerk of Ferrara volunteered his services but the prisoner declined to talk through him.

THE PRISONER'S CONFESSION.

Giannini requested that a friend of his, G. Moresi, a glazier, who lives on Yamhill street, be sent for and this was done. Mr. Moresi came to the jail in the afternoon, and accompanied by Judge Moreland and assistant district attorney Mulkey, went into the prisoner's cell. The latter seemed glad to see Moresi, and began talking with him about business matters.

Moresi became impatient and said: "I haven't time to listen to that. What is it about this murder? You're in a tight fix and you had better tell the truth at once."

Giannini then related in Italian, which was translated by Moresi, the whole story about the pocket book as has already been given above, up to the point where he said he knocked Ricco down.

KILLED HIM IN SELF DEFENSE.

He now said that when Ricco got up he ran toward the house to get a gun which was standing there. Giannini then drew his pistol and fired at him.

The prisoner sat upright as he told this, without a tremor in his voice or the movement of a muscle. Before him sat the interpreter, almost rigid with horror, the cold sweat starting from his face.

"Did you kill him?" asked the interpreter.

"Yes."

"How many times did you shoot him?"

"Three times."

"What did you do with the body?"

"I dragged it over to a creek and hid it, covering it up with brush."

No more questions being asked the prisoner volunteered the statement:

"He would have killed me if I hadn't killed him."

WHERE THE BODY IS HIDDEN.

The prisoner then gave full particulars as to where the body could be found and the following dispatch was sent at once to the sheriff of Skamania county:

"You will find the body of Georgio Ricco in a creek, covered with brush, two hundred yards west of the sugar factory, about three-quarters of a mile from Cape Horn."

The sheriff had been previously notified of the killing, but it was then supposed the body would be found in the Columbia, the factory where it was suspected the crime had been committed being so near the river.

THE DEAD MAN'S WATCH.

In a jewelry store in this city was a watch which belonged to Ricco, and for which he had a ticket, while it was being repaired. On Thursday Giannini presented this ticket and received the watch. [illegible] a friend to whom he owed some money—$20—he drew a well filled purse from his pocket and paid [illegible]. The friend said Giannini must have had over $200 left after paying the debt. However, when he was brought to the jail he had no money. He wore a belt underneath his clothes, but it was empty. It still remains to be seen whether the pockets and money belt of Ricco have been rifled. There were no witnesses to the shooting, and the presence or absence of money on the person of the dead man will have some weight in determining the magnitude of the crime.

THE PRISONER'S APPEARANCE.

Giannini is a well built, handsome looking man, wearing a full beard on a rather bronzed face. He is well educated, is a Swiss Italian, and a civil engineer by profession. He takes his imprisonment [illegible] and seems to think that since his [confession] everything will be quickly settled. [illegible] there is nothing about him that would impress a [illegible] [illegible] thought that he could commit a crime. He will be kept at the city jail until [illegible] can be obtained from the governor [of] Washington territory.

SATURDAY MORNING, AUGUST 19, 1882.

"LIFE HATH ITS BARREN YEARS."

Life hath its barren years,
When blossoms fall untimely down,
When ripened fruitage fails to crown
The summer toil, when nature's frown
Looks only on our tears.

Life hath its faithless days.
The golden promise of the morn,
That seemed for light and gladness born,
Meant only noontide wreck and scorn,
Hushed harp instead of praise.

Life hath its valleys too,
Where we must talk with vain regret,
With mourning clothed, with wild rain wet,
Toward sunlight hopes that soon must set,
All quenched in pitying dew.

Life hath its harvest moons,
Its tasseled corn and purple-weighted vine;
Its gathered sheaves of grain, the blessed sign
Of plenteous ripening bread and pure rich wine,
Full hearts for harvest tunes.

Life hath its hopes fulfilled;
Its glad fruitions, its blest answered prayer,
Sweeter for waiting long, whose holy air,
Indrawn to silent souls, breathes forth its rare,
Grand speech by joy distilled.

NOTES AND NEWS.

Delegate Cannon has gone back to Utah disgusted, but the four Mrs. Cannon are probably glad to get him back in any frame of mind.

A member of the London statistical society says the labors of one-tenth of the population of that great city are devoted exclusively to the making of alcoholic beverages.

It was certainly a singular coincidence that the adopted son of Aaron Burr died in New York only two days after the son of Alexander Hamilton died in the same city.

A religious fact is discovered by the New York Times with reference to the population of the metropolis. Out of 1,300,000 people not more than 100,000 of them are members of Protestant churches.

Arizona sends to the Denver exposition one piece of copper weighing a ton. Very good exhibit that; but couldn't Arizona manage to put a real live cowboy and a genuine unadorned Apache in the exhibition as native products.

Arabi Pasha has a way of persuading the natives to join his standard. Nineteen of them who refused to recognize his authority were shot in Cairo—pour encourager les autres. At that rate, he will soon fill his ranks or depopulate the country.

That was a remarkable convention in Illinois that met during the current week and balloted 1521 times before a choice was made of a nominee for congress. As there were but two candidates, they can both claim to be champions of "staying power."

The state organ of prohibition, at Indianapolis, publishes some statistics going to show that the liquor traffic, in criminal expenses and otherwise, has cost the state, from 1861 to 1881, inclusive, $14,762,369 46; from which deducting $2,377,145 28, receipts for liquor licenses, leaves a net loss to the state of $12,384,213 33.

The railway accidents in Great Britain and Ireland during the year 1881 show a list of 1096 killed and 4554 injured. Of the killed 108 were passengers and of the injured 1096. The rest were employes of the railroad companies or contractors, save 407 killed and 156 injured, who were either suicides or persons who met with accidental injury or death on the tracks.

The rapidity with which the south is developing its cotton manufacturing interests is seen in the fact that during the years 1881-82 the increase in the number of spindles set up was as follows: Georgia, 105,000; Alabama, 34,000; Tennessee, 24,000; Mississippi, 33,000; Louisiana, 21,000, North Carolina, 48,000; South Carolina, 96,000; total, 361,000. The investment represents about $9,763,000 and with the sum required to operate with added, about $12,214,000.

Were the Iowa liquor-law to be strictly enforced no wine could be obtained for communion-services, as there is no exception to the prohibition. The churches are in a quandary as to their duty in the matter, and it is likely that in most instances unfermented grape-juice will be used instead of wine; but the Presbyterians of Vinton have voted to defy the law, and to indemnify the druggist who sells to them.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

India has nearly 20,000,000 acres sown to wheat.

Vermont has 35,000 farms, of which only ninety-seven contain 1000 acres.

J. W. Studebaker of South Bend, Ind., has recently sold nearly all his Hereford cattle.

Mr. Charles Parmelee of Walcott, Ind., has just purchased six very fine Hereford heifers, which will be added to his herd.

The peach yield from St. George's district, Md., is estimated, will be 1,000,000 bushels. From Kent and Queen Anne counties 3,000,000 bushels are expected.

It may be authoritatively stated that ensilage is daily gaining friends throughout the country. Much has been said and written upon this subject, and the result of thorough and extended experiments have practically demonstrated that the preservation of green fodder is a source of profit and that it can be done at comparatively slight expense.

It is understood that several of the polled-Angus cattle recently imported by Messrs. Gudgell & Simpson, and now in quarantine at Quebec, will be put in excellent condition and exhibited at the leading fairs during the coming season. The cattle are conceded to be the best polled beasts ever brought to this country, and will, if shown, create a genuine sensation.

Mr. Milton Briggs, of Kellogg Ia., who has done his state much service by devotion to improvement of stock, well says, in Gov. Gear's Homestead, that "investing money in any breed at high prices under the excitement of speculation will in the future, as it has in the past, prove disastrous." He adds that it is through this "humbug of fancy pedigree" that "many of our best cattle, as well as their owners, are being ruined and, passing off the records, leave no sign."

A decision of considerable importance to farmers and hired help was rendered by the supreme court of New Jersey the other day in the case of Mather vs. Brokaw. Mather contracted to render service to Brokaw for a certain period, but before the expiration of the time agreed upon left his employment without the consent of his employer, and without any good cause. Being refused wages for the work done, he sued for them, but the court decided that the employe could not recover for the work which he had done under the contract, for, having broken the contract, he could not maintain an action under it.

The most encouraging feature of this year's sales of short-horn cattle has thus far been the desire and ability of purchasers to pay ready money in nearly every case. Not a sale has thus far been made where the buyers, who have paid cash, have not been largely in the majority. It is the first time for seventeen years that breeders have been thus fortunate in securing cash for their offerings, and the fact carries with it a feeling of satisfaction which has not been experienced since 1872. Buyers are more numerous, are looking for better bred animals, and are not sticking as to terms. The short-horn interests are in the midst of a prosperous boom, which, from present indications, will continue during the entire season.

Opposition Views on Egypt.

From the London Telegraph.

The subjoined expression of the feelings prevailing on the opposition side of the house of commons with regard to recent events in Egypt emanates from an important source:

Very strong opinions are privately expressed by conservative members as to the responsibility of the government respecting the terrible events which have occurred in Alexandria. No objection is taken to the bombardment, which is regarded as a justifiable proceeding, but the neglect to provide for the probable consequences is held to be open to the most serious condemnation. Arabi, it is pointed out, was fighting with a halter round his neck, and could not with any confidence be expected to surrender. That he might retreat to the interior, leaving the city to be sacked and the Europeans to be massacred was, it is urged, so obvious a contingency that no competent government should have entered on so serious a step as the bombardment without being prepared to follow it up immediately, as has always been done in historical parallels, by the landing of a force to protect the life and property which would otherwise almost certainly be jeopardized by anarchy. There could have been no difficulty, it is pointed out, in being thus prepared, for troops were so near that they might have been quickly summoned to join the fleet, and the bombardment could have been delayed until their arrival.

The extraordinary omission of this precaution is attributed to the optimistic policy of the cabinet, who insisted on believing that the mere threat of coercion would avail to cow Arabi. Just as they supposed the joint note would be effective, and therefore took no steps to enforce its demands, so also, it is said, they vainly believed that the appearance of the fleet would induce submission, and finally, disregarding the teachings of these two lessons, supposed that the bombardment of the forts would settle the matter and bring about a peaceable surrender. The result has been the destruction of valuable property belonging to British subjects, and the perpetration of a horrible massacre—results which, it is contended by the conservatives, the exercise of the most ordinary foresight might have averted.

The session will certainly not be allowed to close now without the Egyptian policy of the government being challenged by the leaders of the opposition, and the catastrophe which has just occurred in Alexandria affords them, in their opinion, one of the strongest grounds with which they have yet been furnished in support of a motion of censure, which is likely to be deferred only until the necessary papers are produced.

WONDERFUL MATERNITY.

Three Sisters become Mothers on the same Day and Each has Twins.

New York World.

The Assyrian Monarch, of the Monarch line, arrived yesterday afternoon with a full complement of Russian Jewish refugees passengers. Among these there were three married women, sisters, named Ruth Jacobsky, Leна Itskok and Miriam Lesvinski, who, with their husbands left Odessa last winter. In Russia, where they had been married on the same day fifteen months ago, they belonged to the middle class. The husbands of the women are tailors by trade. Two weeks since, the tailors, with their wives and co-religionists, were sent on board the Assyrian Monarch for New York. On Sunday, June 1st, Lena Itskok, who is a very prepossessing Jewess about twenty-two years old, became a mother of two boys, healthy girls. Her two sisters were in the [illegible] of the newly made mamma when they [illegible] found that they were in want of the [illegible]. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon Ruth Jacobsky, who is 27 and a good-looking [illegible] as well as her other sister, and had at that [illegible] presented her fortunate sister with two boys. At 9 o'clock at night two more girl strangers made their appearance on board the boat, and Miriam Lesvinski, the youngest sister, aged 19, was receiving the felicitations of her husband and brothers-in-law. On Friday the two boys were initiated into [illegible] the ceremony. At the circumcision they were both named Jacobs. [illegible] named Isaac, which means "I should smile." The girls have not yet been named, but each of the children received a present from the captain of the steamer, who declares that, although he has carried many thousands of passengers in his day, he has never seen such a remarkable trio as the three Russian Jewesses who vied with each other in their presents to their [illegible] and sisters.

There was a total of $[illegible] in the Walla Walla county treasury on the 1st of August.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST.

Western Oregon.

Howard Merry was died at his home near Corvallis on the 16th inst of erysipelas, aged 50 years.

There were fourteen threshers at work within a [illegible] six miles of [illegible] at one time this week.

The [illegible] driftwood has been removed from below and around the basin at [illegible]. The stone wall leading to Canemah has been repaired also.

The fine stallion Pilot, owned by Wm. Hardinger, house of Monroe, has one of his fore legs broken in two places recently, and will [illegible] a total loss. He was valued at $1000.

Enterprise: Morris, the murderer of Sheriff Officer, is safely jailed in Dallas city. Not the least degree of sorrow does he manifest for his atrocious deed. He has a continual fear of being lynched, and desires the doctors to cut him up when he is dead.

Charles Goodchild, of Eugene City, has a Jersey cow twenty-one months old which yields milk from which two and a half pounds of butter is made daily. By the time this cow is four years old, she will yield sufficient milk from which to make four pounds of butter daily.

The German Evangelical Reformed Bethany Church, of Salem, has purchased the church building formerly owned by A. Stanton, of that city. The pastor of the mission, Rev. J. Meinhardt, was highly encouraged and commissioned by the home mission board to make the purchase.

Washington Territory.

Diphtheria is again prevalent in Walla Walla.

Rev. J. M. Irvin of Walla Walla has been appointed president of the Blue Mountain university at La Grand.

Gen. T. R. Tannatt will ship fine samples of eastern Washington grains and grasses to the Minnesota state fair, having himself superintended their boxing.

At the Baker City conference it was directly charged that G. E. Ackerman had received $[illegible] for Blue Mountain university and had reported only $3000. Charges were also preferred against Rev. S. M. Driver.

It is said a change in departments is contemplated for the 10th and 21st regiments of U. S. infantry. The 10th will in October or November, come west over the Northern Pacific route, and the 21st will go east over the same. They will go by rail as far as possible and will march the four hundred miles remaining. They will probably meet on the march.

The log drives on the Yakima river are over for the season and are considered entirely successful. The amount of lumber brought to Ainsworth this season by the N. P. Co., down the Yakima, amounts to 7,000,000 feet. The railroad company's mill is running night and day. It cut 52,000 feet on Monday last. All the men that were engaged on the drive were discharged and paid off at Ainsworth.

The Klickitat county agricultural society will build a pavilion 50x80 feet, 16 feet high, for the ladies exhibit. The old pavilion will be used for the agricultural exhibit. A grand stand 60 feet long with a seating capacity for 500 persons, will also be built at once. A reservoir of 3000 gallons capacity has been built. The pipe is laid and water running to the grounds from the hydraulic ram at the Goldendale mill flume.

In contradiction of the statement of old residents of Walla Walla who assert that they never saw as hot and dry a summer as the present one, the Union furnishes the following figures: Turning to our diary for 1875 we find that on the 3d day of July the mercury indicated 90 deg. On the 4th of July it was 94 deg. at noon. From that date to the 22d of August the mercury ran up to over 90 deg. every day but two, the 14th and 15th of July, when it got as low as 84 deg. On the 22d of August there was a heavy rain storm and the mercury ran down to 74 deg. at noon. On the 12th of July it was 100 deg. in the shade at 5 P. M. On the 20th and 21st of July it was 102 deg. at 5 P. M., and 146 in the sun at 5:15 P. M. There was no rain that year from the 19th of June to the 23d of August.

Idaho.

Judge John H. Watson, formerly of Silver City, died a few days ago at Elko, Nevada.

Wood river is full of fine from about two miles below Galena, down to the Warm Springs ranch.

A fine specimen of wheat grown on Wood river is shown in Boise city. It is tall and well headed out, and shows that agriculture as well as mining may be made one of the resources of that wonderful country.

A week ago last Saturday, Peter Walner was instantly killed by a stroke of lightning on Stanley creek. He was at work with several others opening a placer claim when he was hit. Deceased was a native of Prussia, 50 years of age. He had resided in Stanley Basin since 1868, and previous to that time in Idaho City.

Crops Damaged by Rain.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Aug. 18.—Recent heavy rains and consequent overflow of streams have caused much damage to the smaller grain and tobacco crops of the state, especially in the eastern part. Insects have also done considerable damage to tobacco, so that the crop will be about three-quarters the average and of inferior quality.

BE WISE AND HAPPY.

If you will stop all your extravagant and wrong notions in doctoring yourself and families with expensive doctors or humbug cure-alls, that do harm always, and use only nature's simple remedies for all your ailments, you will be wise, well and happy, and save great expense. The greatest remedy for this, the great, wise and good will tell you, is Hop Bitters—rely on it. See another column.—Press.

THE "ORIGINAL" UNCLE TOM.

Mrs. Stowe Testifies that there Wasn't any such Person.

Indianapolis Times.

It has long been reported, and by many believed, that Mrs. Stowe, authoress of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," drew the character of Uncle Tom from an old negro who formerly lived [illegible], and when she [illegible] she formerly lived [illegible] her brother, the Rev. H. W. Beecher, [illegible] while he resided in this city. In order to verify the story, [illegible] the editor of the Times wrote to Mrs. Stowe [illegible] to the matter and a statement for facts in regard to the original of the character of Uncle Tom. Following is a reply:

SAG [illegible], July 27, 1882.

Dear Sir: In reply to your inquiries, I will say that the character of Uncle Tom was not the biography of any one man. The first suggestion of the character [illegible] while in Walnut Hills, [illegible] I was told of a [illegible] my colored cook to her husband, a slave in Kentucky. She told me he was so faithful his master [illegible] trusted him to come alone and unwatched to Cincinnati to market his farm produce. Now, [illegible] coming to the laws of Ohio, gave the man his freedom, [illegible] slave of any master brought on [illegible] slaves [illegible] to become free, de facto. But she said [illegible] that the faithful fellow had given his word as a Christian to his master that he would not take advantage of the law [illegible] his master promising him his freedom. Whether he ever got it or not I [illegible] know not. It was some four or five years after [illegible] when the fugitive slave law made me determined to [illegible] showing what slavery was, that I conceived the plan of writing the history of a faithful Christian slave. After I had begun the story I got, at the antislavery rooms in Boston, the autobiography of Josiah Henson, and introduced some of its most striking incidents into my story. The good people of England gave my simple, good friend Josiah Henson the enthusiastic welcome as the Uncle Tom of the story, though he was alive and well and likely long to live, and the Uncle Tom of the story was buried in a martyr's grave. So much in reply to your inquiries. I trust this plain statement may prevent my answering any more letters on this subject.

Truly yours, H. B. STOWE.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE.

The San Francisco Freight Market.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 18.—The Commercial News has the following review of the freight and charter market: Unfavorable foreign advices reporting better crop prospects, large offerings of American wheat and sale thereof in cargoes in all positions, have all combined to depress the freight market here and another decline is to be reported. Nor has this retrograde movement been confined to freights. Wheat, which has been more or less difficult to obtain except at rates precluding free purchase by exporters, is now to be had in large quantities at values which enable shippers to operate freely, and it is reported that an advance in rates of interest have had the effect of drawing farmers out. Inquiries from the interior concerning the state of the market are daily increasing. The week opened rather quietly with an occasional spot charter at steady rates up to Wednesday, when chartering became active and several vessels were placed at a rate ranging from 38s to 40s. The best guide to the position probably is the British ship Centaur, which was taken for wheat to Cork, U. K., at 2£ 13s 6d. At the close the market was steady with light demand, importers being for the time supplied.
